

McLennan County Community Plan 2023

What Is a Community Plan?

The Heart of Texas Council of Governments Criminal Justice Division requires that each county have a Criminal Justice Community Plan to identify gaps in services regarding criminal justice issues.

This document reflects the efforts of McLennan County citizens concerned with assuring that any gaps in services are addressed to the benefit of the entire county. The names of those involved in the process of developing this plan are listed on the following pages under “Community Planning Team.”

Though the final draft of this plan was completed in January 2020, this is a work in progress, as new criminal justice goals are identified, the constituency of the Planning Team and requirements of the Plan are subject to change from year to year.

If you are reading this plan and have not been involved in its development, you are invited to join in this ongoing effort. Any questions you may have may be addressed to the Criminal Justice Program of the Heart of Texas Council of Governments. Contact information is provided on page 37 of this document.

The McLennan County Commissioner’s Court supports the concept of community planning by providing staff support and resources for the development and implementation of the McLennan County Community Plan. Additionally, the regional Criminal Justice Advisory Committee (CJAC) and the Heart of Texas Council of Governments’ Governing Board (Executive Committee) invite grant applications from county departments, as well as community organizations which address gaps in services identified in the Community Plan.

Brief Description and History of McLennan County:

McLennan County is in east central Texas, 230 miles inland from the Gulf of Mexico, bordered by Hill, Limestone, Falls, Bell, Coryell, and Bosque counties. Waco, the county seat, is on the Brazos River at the intersection of Interstate Highway 35 and U.S. Highway 84, ninety miles south of Dallas and 100 miles north of Austin.

McLennan County was established by the Texas legislature on January 22, 1850, and named after Neil McLennan, one of the early settlers. The county government was organized in August 1850 with Waco as its county seat. The county originally included its present area, as well as the land to the northwest as far as the northern boundary of the Robertson colony; it was reduced to its present size in 1854 when Bosque County was established. Although McLennan County was organized too late to be included in the 1850 census, its population at that time has been estimated at several hundred. Rapid growth was possible because, within two years of the establishment of Waco Village, the frontier was pushed well to the northwest of the area. The Indians who lived there were moved to a Texas reservation in 1854 and then to Oklahoma in 1859. Aside from Waco, the earliest communities in the county were at Bosqueville and Bold Springs (later called West).

Cotton was the dominant feature of McLennan County agriculture from the 1880s to the 1950s. As the cotton market recovered after Reconstruction, farmers new to the McLennan County area began cultivating the black, waxy soil in the eastern sections and found that cotton grew well there. In the years following World War II Waco and McLennan County experienced a resurgence of population growth, and the transition to a peacetime economy went smoothly. In 1950 130,194 people resided in McLennan County; 65 percent of that total lived in Waco. The county, and especially Waco, experienced a serious setback in May 1953, when a tornado struck the downtown area. Several city blocks were flattened, leaving 144 people dead and 1,097 injured. Several hundred homes, cars, and businesses were damaged or destroyed, and many buildings had to be razed.

A new interest in local history prompted the reconstruction of Fort Fisher as the Texas Ranger Hall of Fame and Museum and the renovation of the suspension bridge. In the early 1980s, 76 percent of the land in the county was devoted to agriculture. Cotton, corn, oats, and wheat were the primary crops, accounting for 90 percent of the 310,000 acres harvested; other crops were sorghum, hay, potatoes, tomatoes, and watermelon. Nearly 60 percent of the county's agricultural receipts came from livestock and livestock products, the most important ones being turkeys, cattle, milk, sheep, wool, angora goats, mohair, and hogs. Industries in the county surpassed agriculture in terms of income and number of people employed, but the two spheres were closely interrelated. Poultry processing, manufacture of prepared feeds, and dairy production were among the county's important businesses. Other large employers included professional and related services, wholesale and retail trade, finance, insurance, and real estate.

McLennan County has a very diverse population with rapidly changing demographics. While agricultural production and marketing remain a major contributor to the region's economy, industrial development along the Interstate 35 corridor is making a significant contribution to economic stability and growth. Societal and family stability issues have also become increasingly important as our population changes. Research shows that young people who participate in organized youth clubs are 85 percent less likely to end up in jail. For over 90 years, the 4-H program of the Texas Cooperative Extension has been helping youth reach positive goals. Food safety, healthy living principles, child safety, and pressures on families remain critical programming areas of Texas Cooperative Extension in McLennan County.

A portion of this information comes from the Texas State Historical Association Handbook of Texas Online.

Identification of Community Problems

General Public Safety Needs and Issues

Crime is a complex and multifaceted problem, and crime control requires the constant and coordinated efforts of a wide range of public and private agencies. Countywide criminal justice planning is an essential precursor to the effective coordination of all varieties of crime amelioration activities in the county. The agencies that compose the McLennan County criminal justice system jointly strive to enforce lawful standards of conduct, protect individuals and communities, assist victims, improve institutional capabilities, and engage the community and its citizens in crime prevention while preserving individual civil liberties and protecting basic human rights.

It is necessary to strive toward these goals by helping to facilitate the collaboration of community groups, law enforcement agencies, prosecutors, courts, and correctional agencies throughout the County. A broad approach to defining the crime problem and designing methods for its control has been identified as a priority. Issues related to crime have been studied and analyzed on a continuum from the overall social environment to post-crime responses, including community structure and dynamics, crime prevention, early intervention, and various types of criminal and juvenile justice agency responses. Within these parameters, this planning process develops, implements, and refines the community criminal justice plan to help meet the emerging needs of McLennan County. The goal of this planning process is to achieve a significant reduction in the frequency and severity of crime to facilitate a sense of pride, health, and safety in all our communities by:

- ◆ Promoting the planning and implementation of comprehensive strategies to prevent and control crime in general and violence in particular, throughout the community.
- ◆ Identifying philosophical principles that will promote the participation of law enforcement, judiciary, prosecution, corrections, victims, treatment providers, educators, media, businesses, and citizens throughout the community in the development of strategies to prevent, reduce and control crime and violence in the community.
- ◆ Promoting the fairness, effectiveness, and efficiency of all segments of the criminal and juvenile justice system.

PREVENTION AND INTERVENTION

The building of assets in youth and the community is an important component of a community plan. Therefore, it is imperative that prevention issues take precedence over those based on incarceration and deterrence if the long-term impact of crime control spending is to be maximized. Nonetheless, the control of known delinquents who present a clear threat to public safety must also remain an important strategy.

In each of the areas below, problems are identified, and data is included that supports both the existence and severity of the problems as they are found in McLennan County. Below is a discussion of the problems, the way the problems are being addressed, and strategically how responses to these community problems could be improved.

Criminal Justice Issues (listed in order of priority, greatest need first)

3. Transport of Mental Health Individuals

Data Collection:

Transport of mental health patients is consuming large amounts of officers’ time due to a lack of staff, placement, patrol cars, and other resources. Officers need to stay with mental health patients as there are a limited number of locked beds.

Recommendations:

- Develop a multi-agency crisis center (outpatient services) – the clinic would function as a minor emergency room at night and a medical clinic from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.
- Change transportation policy to reduce transportation time and time officers must remain on scene.
- Training
- Consider writing a regional collaborative grant to pay officers’ O.T. and vehicle expenses.
- Contract with a private agency to set fees to pay O.T. for mental health transport.
- Need 2nd transport vehicles.
- Program for data collection

Resources/Successes:

- HOTBHN
- Crisis Treatment Center at DePaul
- Paladin Security
- Mobile Crisis Outreach Team (MCOT)
- Advocacy Center for Crime Victims and Children – participated in 900 presentations to approximately 8,500 attendees, primarily students K-12.

4. Lack of Manpower for Law Enforcement – programs and grant funds being cut.

Data Collection:

6. Equipment Deficiencies

Jurisdictions across the HOTCOG Region are faced with a lack of equipment. There are significant pressures being placed on the Justice Information Systems in use by Federal, State, and local governments. These pressures have resulted from the post-September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center, which caused a major emphasis to be placed on sharing justice information, along with ongoing, significant changes in technology. Compounding the problem is that these pressures are being placed on systems that are frequently old, have limited functionality, and lack the flexibility to address new functional or technical requirements. There is a major movement underway in Texas counties to improve their Justice Information Systems (JIS). The new generation of systems is frequently referred to as Integrated Justice Information Systems (IJIS). The integration occurs at two levels:

- a comprehensive system architecture that serves the needs of all justice-related and law enforcement agencies within a county government.
- the ability to integrate a county’s justice information with other governments, including other local, state, and federal agencies that integrate within that county. By the single entry of data in a county’s IJIS system, the information is made available to all agencies within the county boundaries, and state and federal government justice agencies.

For example, a police officer making a traffic stop could have immediate access to the vehicle registration data and determine if the driver is wanted within the county, in another city or county, or by state and federal agencies.

Data Collection:

- Interoperable communication
- Information systems operated by Texas justice agencies have been proprietary, and incapable of linking and exchanging information; consequently, the justice community must address new strategies to deliver effective and efficient information-related services throughout the State of Texas. Recently, federal and state agencies, urban counties, rural counties, and municipalities from across Texas have been discussing the need to join together in the development of an integrated justice information system. Although justice agencies need the same information, they have historically been focused on capturing and using information necessary for its own processes-legacy system.

- Crime scene unit equipment
- Property room equipment
- Facilities to store equipment
- Need for vehicles.

Recommendations:

- Regional RMS
- Mobile Data Terminals
- Radio trunking system
- GPS tracking in each car to provide efficient response to emergency calls.

Resources:

- Bureau of Justice
- Texas 1033 Community Facilities Grant Program

7. Evidence Security/Storage Capabilities

Data Collection:

- Lack of facility space and security
- Lack of technology, software, and support
- Lack of trained personnel
- Lack of evidence collection equipment
- Lack of evidence processing equipment

Recommendations:

- Search for sources of funding to help with training costs.
- Need for local training with less time out of service and scheduled to accommodate shift personnel.
- Support funding streams that will allow for the construction of a new firing range and driving range in the county to be utilized by all agencies within the HOTCOG Region
- Have training at the P.D. locations.
- Coordinate training for law enforcement from MHMR/Alzheimer’s Foundation in dealing with the safe return of elderly, reported missing or wandering about the community with the diseases of Alzheimer’s or dementia, including autism.

Juvenile Justice Issues (listed in order of priority, greatest need first)

1. Need for intensive family intervention.

Needs:

- Work with families on a case management basis to address juvenile issues.
- Shortage of case managers due to lack of funding

- Address poverty cycle and economic responsibility/independence in programs
- Push truancy issues
- Transition 17-year-olds
- Address disproportionate minority contact.
- Teen dating violence/sexting

Recommendations:

- Develop a collaborative effort among agencies.
- Establish Family Drug Court-Drug court for CPS cases and offenders.
- Family counseling
- Pursue funding streams and resources for children of incarcerated parents.
- More education and prevention efforts in schools to break cycles of violence and poverty.

2. Substance Abuse

In recent years the overall crime rate has decreased, however, studies show that a record number of crimes committed today are driven by drugs and/or alcohol. Drug-driven crimes can be defined as an offense committed for the sole purpose of obtaining monies for the purchase of illegal substances or the sale of such substances.

Support of Needs:

- In a study conducted by the Department of Justice – Bureau of Justice Statistics, 61,000 convicted prisoners reported that their offenses were committed in order to obtain money for drugs. The study also revealed that of 12,658 homicides committed, 4.5% of the homicides were related to narcotics. Since the mid-1980s, almost every state and federal court system has experienced an overload of drug offenses on its dockets.
- The high recidivism rates associated with drug-related offenses have proven that prosecution and incarceration alone will not break the cycle of recurrence of drug-related offenses. Based on the belief that drug abuse treatment is demonstrably more effective in reducing both drug addiction and drug-related crime, jurisdictions developed an alternative approach to the traditional adjudication process.
- High percentage of substance abusers wind up in the ER, draining resources and time. Conducting evaluation and approving admittance directly to substance abuse treatment centers would reduce illegal drug use and cyclical ER visits.

Recommendations:

- Pursue funding streams and resources to support prevention and treatment programs, including bullying prevention.
- Support drug/alcohol court programs with mandatory participation
- Seek medically supervised alcohol detoxification services for offenders suffering from acute alcohol abuse.
- Work toward affordable residential and supportive outpatient services for offenders needing longer-term care.
- Drug Court for families involved in CPS and Juvenile cases.
- Need intensive day treatment program.
- Increased public education on the dangers and illegality of Bath Salts and K2-type substances.

3. Need for Juvenile Mental Health Services

In 2019–20, about 55 percent of public schools provided diagnostic mental health assessment services to evaluate students for mental health disorders, and 42 percent offered mental health treatment services. Both types of services were more common in 2019–20 than in 2017–18. In 2019–20, the majority of schools (54 percent) reported that their efforts to provide mental health services to students were limited in a major way by inadequate funding. Forty percent reported inadequate access to licensed mental health professionals as a major limitation. (Institute of Education Sciences, Report on Indicators of School Crime and Safety: 2021.)

Needs:

- Gap in services – no school-based mental health day treatment for kids
- Limited bi-lingual counselors
- Recidivism
- Traumatic Brain Injury
- Crisis or triage center for juveniles
- Lack of respite services for families with children with mental health issues
- Need more providers of trauma-focused services.
- Limited psychiatrists who focus on children

Needs:

- Need for transitional programs.
- School failure, truancy, and dropout
- Low reading skills among juvenile delinquents
- Grade level is not the same as age level in many juveniles requiring services.
- Anger management classes
- Due to the high correlation between reading skills and truancy, there is a need for remedial programs.
- There are some existing classes; however, transportation remains an issue.
- Recidivism
- Undiagnosed learning disabilities and students with learning disabilities not receiving appropriate services.

Recommendations:

- Programs provide preparations and support for re-entry in schools and community.
- Specialized school-based programs designed to prevent school failure, truancy, and dropout.
- Academic remediation
- After an hour counseling is needed, but public transportation doesn't run after 6 p.m.

5. School Disciplinary and Attendance Issues

Truancy is one of the minor juvenile crimes and is often very difficult to enforce. There is substantial evidence that youth who become truant will eventually drop out of school and put themselves at high risk of becoming disadvantaged unproductive citizens. The linkages between truancy, tobacco, alcohol, and other drug use can lead to other chronic delinquent behaviors and possibly other violent behaviors. Truancy is the first sign of trouble. Coupled with academic failure, these two indicators may be the initial signs that a young person is giving up and dropping out. For example, according to the Department of Education/National Center for Education Statistics, over the past decade between 347,000 and 544,000, 10th through 12th-grade students left school each year without a high school diploma. Status dropout rates for 16 to 24-year-olds were reported at 10.3% nationally. (The Condition of Education 2023, National Center for Education Statistics.)

The high percentage of students dropping out of high school jeopardizes the future economic security of the target area, increases the number of individuals with low educational attainment levels, and indicates a definite need for academic and prevention services.

Needs:

- Anger management classes
- Dropouts/truancy
- Bullying
- Sexual aggression
- Substance abuse
- Because of the high correlation between reading skills and truancy, there is a need for prevention programs.
- There are some existing classes; however, transportation remains an issue.
- After hours counseling is needed, but public transportation doesn't run after 6 p.m.
- Recidivism
- Gang prevention and intervention
- Address disproportionate minority contact.
- Homeless youth

Recommendations:

- Need for resource officers in school districts, not only for truancy issues but problematic juveniles.
- Case manager for each Justice of the Peace
- Increased training for school staff
- Pursue funding streams and resources to support bullying prevention training and programs.
- Academic remediation
- Vocational training for students
- Opportunities for school credit recovery

Interagency Cooperation

The McLennan County Community Planning group was very involved in the planning process. All agencies were proactive in their approach to identifying the needs of the communities and by putting their own special interests aside, they succeeded in developing a strategic plan to aid in prioritizing and closing the identified gaps in the community.

The Planning Committee shared the different services they offered, as well as services offered by agencies and individuals that were unable to attend the planning meeting.

Law enforcement, juvenile justice, victims' services, and social services groups agreed to continue to work together to reach the overall objectives of making the McLennan County communities a safer environment, as well as, increasing awareness through intervention and prevention, and education.

Long-Range Plan Development

The McLennan County Community Planning Team works in conjunction with other planning groups in the county to ensure a regular exchange of ideas. Individuals active in the planning process generally serve on many of these committees and share mutual concerns.

The McLennan County Community Planning Team strives to meet periodically to review the plan and make necessary additions and deletions. The team is committed to meeting each biennium, but agency and community representatives may submit suggestions and changes via telephone and e-mail throughout the year to the Community Planning Coordinator. Wherever possible, e-mail is used to reduce the need for meetings, printing, postage, etc.

It is the intent of the Community Planning Team to improve outcomes for McLennan County families struggling with problems described in the plan's focus areas. Efforts are being made by many McLennan County agencies and organizations to address problems with local funds, as well as grant funds from multiple state and federal sources. To the extent that these funds are available, the Community Planning Team will continue to urge agencies to provide programs that address the outlined focus areas.
